NC couple loves their Razor

After moving to the other side of Lake Norman in North Carolina, Earl and Janet Curran went in search of a new pontoon to go with their lakeside home. The Currans have been on this lake for over 30 years and the timing just felt right to upgrade from the two boats the family had enjoyed for years.

Their older traditional pontoon as well as their fiberglass jet boat had helped raise the Curran's three daughters, but now it was time to trade in both boats for just one that in their eyes could be the perfect replacement.

"We liked the pontoon layout, but my youngest daughter Alison needed a better wake for wakeboarding and pontoons just don't make a good wake," explains Earl. "All pontoons look alike with some looking better than others, but we wanted a pontoon with style."

Dream Boat

The extensive search for a stylish pontoon led them to Caravelle Boat Group and its line of unique fiberglass pontoon boats. After stopping into the Boat N RV dealership off Interstate 85 that is along the highway the couple passes regularly, it was the 2016 258 PF Razor Black Widow that caught their eye.

"We pass by this dealership all the time and I kept meaning to stop in and check out these boats," says Earl. "Then we stopped in and started talking and the next thing I knew we had ordered a boat."

"You really do get to custom order it how you want, which is nice," adds Janet. "You just tell them what you want and don't want instead of having to go with a boat that is already on the lot."

Customized

When it came to the color, the couple, who have been married over 37 years, wanted the fiberglass Razor to be red on top and red on the bottom, something at that time the dealership had never considered before. The Currans also wanted red and white furniture and that's exactly what they got.

When it came time to deliver the boat, Boat N RV didn't just toss the seasoned skippers the keys and wish them good luck. Part of the sale is to take the new boat out with the customer for a lake test and for this the dealership sent its lead boat technician, Luke Smith.

"Luke is a great guy and was very helpful," says Janet. "He delivered our boat and put it in the water and then spent a couple of hours with us on the lake to make sure we didn't have any questions."

Earl Curran went in search of a pontoon with style and that's exactly what he discovered with the Caravelle Razor Black Widow pontoon.

Any day Herb can get out on the boat with his Poppy (Earl), it's a good day.

The Razor pontoons from Caravelle are continuing to be a popular option for other consumers as well.

"We've sold quite a few of them lately because people really love the new style and cutting edge look," says Luke. "With a planing hull says Earl. "I maybe should have gone with a 200hp engine because it is a lot of boat, but really the 175hp gives us everything we need to cruise the lake as well as water sports."

Alison is the wakeboarder in the Curran family and her sisters Emily and Sarah enjoy boating too since they were all raised on the water. As their daughters grow, so does the family, as Earl and Janet now have two grandkids as well, which is another reason the timing for a larger 25-foot boat that could accommodate more passengers made the most sense to them.

instead of a displacement hull that you get with a traditional pontoon, the added performance is also another key factor. It's just a real eye-catcher that is becoming a great option for those looking for a stylish-looking pontoon boat."

Breaking It In

The boat was delivered in November of last year so the Currans are still just breaking in the Razor pontoon that is powered with a Suzuki 175hp four-stroke. At this point they're both still very happy with their decision and wouldn't change anything about it.

"We're very happy with it; it's been a great boat for us so far,"

The next generation is also enjoying the boating lifestyle including Earl and Janet's grandson Herb who is at the wheel next to his Mimi.

Off The Lift

The winter season varies—even in North Carolina—so the Razor has spent a lot of its first few months on the boat lift under a covered slip, but with summer now here that has all changed. While Earl continues to work full-time at Acucote Inc. in Graham as the company's vice president of business development, Janet is enjoying the retired life after working for 32 years as a school teacher. But even with a full schedule, the couple has made it a top priority to get out on Lake Norman this year and let everyone else on the water know what they've already discovered: Caravelle offers pontoon boats with style.

Alison Curran is the youngest of three daughters and is also the wakeboarder in the family.

Recently the PDB crew was given an opportunity to test out another version of the Razor Black Widow, the 236.

Powered by a Mercury 150 four-stroke outboard, we reached a top speed of 38.8 miles per hour, but what impressed us most was the way she handles. We dived beautifully into sharp turns for some serious fun. Clearly the optional Monster Wakeboard tower on this particular model we tested, complete with speakers and lights, is going to get a lot of good use for some family who loves water sports.

Below the standard rear-facing lounges are a deep table storage compartment on one side and an extremely tall (6-foot, 4-inch) pop-up changing room on the other that includes a portable toilet. Other key features worth highlighting include the kitchen package with a sink/faucet, Coleman grill, sliding drawers and storage room below, and directly across tucked in nicely underneath the helm console is a mini refrigerator.

Caravelle has not only earned a solid reputation for its unique fiberglass hull, but the amenities—both standard as well as optional—this manufacturer is able to incorporate into its layouts are just another reason why the Georgia-based builder is continuing to change the way others see pontoon boats.

THREE THINGS

Loaded with amenities, this Caravelle is full of hidden features and is highlighted by unique and purpose-built storage and an eye-catching design.

BREAKDOWN

If you're looking for a pontoon boat that breaks the traditional mold, look no further than this Razor. While the fiberglass pontoon side of the business is just getting established, the Caravelle name actually goes back to the late 60s. And with that background the Georgia-based manufacturer is able to be creative in designing a sporty and unique-looking craft. The more we looked around, the more amenities we discovered.

Starting at the well-balanced helm console, the gauges are on the left side of the dash while the rocker switches are on the right. Legroom is limited for the captain in the bucket helm seat, but the tradeoff is the storage space under the helm that on this boat includes a mini fridge. And what's better than having a refrigerator onboard? How about a DC-powered wine cooler that is directly across? Included with the wine cooler is a large galley that includes a faucet and sink, a mounted Coleman gas grill, one of four 12-volt outlets onboard, drawer storage, as well as access to the Fusion stereo that is protected from the elements with its own cover. Speaking of music, there are a total of six speakers with an amp and subwoofer and we especially love the large speakers mounted on the Monster Tower. The sporty and functional wakeboard tower is an option, but based on how well it completes the boat we feel it's a must-have upgrade.

Getting back to the long list of amenities, stored below the portside bow bench seat is a second grill that can be mounted at the bow when you're ready to do some grill'n. Also in the bow is the only pontoon diving board we're aware of. The LilliPad board is easy to use and folds flush when not in use and because we personally tried it out ourselves (it's a tough job but someone has to do it), we'd recommend this upgrade as well.

We noticed another mount receptacle in the floor so we did some further investigating and discovered a large beach umbrella stored below one of the two rear-facing stern lounges. It also comes with a second pole so it can be used off the boat too. Below the portside rear lounge is an extremely deep changing room with a portable toilet and a pop-up curtain that stands 6 feet, 4 inches tall and will easily accommodate most adults.

Other features include a deep in-floor ski locker, two fishing seats with livewell and vinyl flooring.

INSPECTION

Caravelle refers to its patented evolutionary hull design as a Modified Cat to a Pad V. It is hand-laid and foam-filled with five lifting points that are designed to glide across the water and bank in a turn like a performance boat.

Inside the boat from bow to stern there is nearly 18 and a half feet of deck space on this 25-footer with the gate heights ranging from 20 inches tall in the bow to nearly 23 inches in the stern.

HANDLING

The combination of a Suzuki 200hp four-stroke and the evolutionary hull equal a responsive and very fun boat to drive. Because the beam is a little narrower than traditional pontoons, we could really get this boat to bank nicely in some sharp turns.

FINAL THOUGHTS

It really is amazing all the amenities that are packed into this boat, plus we love the specific compartments and holders for those features. Unique and one-of-a-kind don't even begin to describe this fiberglass pontoon boat.

Why we love this boat... This is a feature-rich boat with a lot of those amenities coming standard and you could probably argue the options should be considered must-haves too.

Just being picky... At the helm the legroom is somewhat limited, but the tradeoff is the extra storage space under the helm that on this particular model includes a mini fridge.

Razor E-Toon Teams Up With Suzuki

When it comes to current trends, Suzuki Marine knows very well the popularity of the pontoon segment. As those in the boat business have continued to witness, pontoons are hot and in some ways the driving force of the entire boating industry. Okay, so we may have a slightly biased opinion when it comes to pontoon boats, but no one is denying the popularity of the 'toon. So when Suzuki was ready to get the word out that it was releasing its new 200 four-stroke, it wasn't a hard choice to figure out which type of boat would be best to debut it on.

Suzuki could have mounted the new 200hp outboard on any high-end pontoon and been just fine, but instead decided to take it up a notch by teaming up with Caravelle Boats. Now, for those trying to figure out what a fiberglass company based in Georgia—best known for its off shore boats—has to do with the pontoon industry, listen up. Last fall a completely new line of boats called the Razor E-Toon line was released from Caravelle Boats and they're making a positive wake of their own.

"With I/O's suffering and the outboard pontoon segment going strong, we wanted to participate in a market where people were buying product," says Caravelle President Chad Roberson. "We call it an 'E-Toon' because it's not a pontoon and it's not a deck boat, but rather an evolution with its fiberglass Multi-Hull Cat-V with five lifting points so it glides across the water and banks in a turn like a performance boat should."

The first Razor E-Toons were released in July last year at Caravelle's annual dealer meeting and so far the manufacturer has had a great response—so good in fact, that Caravelle just released its special edition Black Widow Razor to show what a perfect match this fiberglass pontoon is with the new Suzuki.

PDB magazine had a chance in Key Largo in the Florida Keys to not only test out the new Suzuki 200, but to also see firsthand what the Black Widow could do in some rough water. While the majority of our tests are held on lakes, it was nice to see how well this new pontoon could do when the conditions weren't exactly sunny and 75 degrees. The latest Razor E-Toon proved to be solid from bow to stern, as despite a pounding out in the Atlantic on a day not typically ideal for a lot of pontoon boats, we never heard as much as a rattle.

ATTENTION STEALER

For all the positive attention it earned out on the water as we passed larger boats on their way out to sea, the response back at the dock was even more overwhelming. At the Ocean Reef Club in Key Largo, there's not a shortage of money or high-end boats to say the least. Yet, the Black Widow attracted a lot of extra attention from members as well as visitors to the luxury resort. Those walking the marina couldn't help but do a double take as they tried to not only figure out who the manufacturer was, but just what type of boat specifically it was.

The mostly black boat with just the right amount of green accent color clearly has a look that is like nothing else out there. Speaking of new looks, the new Suzuki was also showing off a new look with its black matte finish that instantly gives the entire boat package a sporty and stylish feel to it.

While the Razor E-Toon pontoon line is just starting to show up on bodies of water around the country, this particular model jumped out even more since it was the company's Black Widow special edition version that was being shown to the public for the first time.

"We wanted to get into the pontoon business, but didn't want to go the aluminum route like everyone else," recalls Roberson. "Fiberglass is durable, has salt water advantages and is cost effective."

SUZUKI POWER

With the new Suzuki 200hp outboard on the back, we easily reached speeds over 40 miles per hour at full throttle, even in the choppy water. The Black Widow is rated for up to a 200hp engine and when paired with the 8-foot, 3-inch beam, it really turns sharp, while still staying in complete control.

"Our pontoon line is built to perform in high 30 mph speeds, bank tight in the corners and handles very well," says Roberson. "It jumps up on plane in seconds with the combination of our unique hull and the Suzuki 200. I love the new Suzuki because it's a great fit for our boat and I love that all Suzuki's outboards are quiet and powerful."

MAKE IT YOUR OWN

The particular model we tested in Florida included a Coleman grill, full entertainment center and a pop-up fiberglass changing room that is well hidden and a great example of well-used space. As the company continues to grow, there will be even more options and standard features available so the consumer can customize the pontoon to fit all his specific needs.

When you're the owner of a company that's heavy into RVs — like Caravelle Boat Group owner Don Littlefield, who also owns the Boat N RV group of superstores — you take a different slant on things. The Razor 258 Party Fish proves the point.

UNIQUE FACTOR

Truth be told, 75 percent of this review could reside under the Unique Factor heading. Anyone who subscribes to the adage “if you’ve seen one pontoon boat, you’ve seen ‘em all” hasn’t seen Razor’s new 258 Party Fish. The differences begin at the bow, where there’s a LilliPad diving board, which is one of the hottest pontoon accessories. It’s really well engineered and transmits very little force to the boat, even when a linebacker-sized diver goes for a “flying squirrel.” But what’s different here is it’s a standard feature and is mounted on the bow, neither of which we’ve seen before. For safety, there are angled steps and a handhold to keep you steady. Up front, instead of fencing, the bow section is ringed by stainless steel railings that look cool but could present toddler containment issues.

One occasionally sees grills on pontoons, but seldom are they a standard feature. The 258PF actually has two standard grills. So if you’ve ever wanted to hold an Iron Chef grilling competition, this is your boat. The first grill is a Coleman camper-style gas grill mounted atop the starboard-side kitchen area; the second, a portable Kuuma propane grill, can be mounted on a pedestal next to the diving board (suspend the diving action when cooking, though). The only downside is that the Coleman rattles when the boat is running over lumpy water. The 258PF has a pair of other unique standard features: a six-bottle DC wine cooler in the entertainment center and a 12v DC 1.7-cubic-foot refrigerator in the driver’s console. A robust house battery system is needed to use both.

PERFORMANCE

Another interesting feature of this “pontoon” boat is that it is fiberglass above the waterline and it has a fiberglass hull instead of aluminum tubes. The unusual hybrid design of the 258PF’s patented Evolutionary Hull features a catamaran up front and a stepped racing hull in the back with 17 degrees of deadrise. Our test boat was packing a Suzuki DF175 four-stroke, which is 75 hp less than the max for this model and 35 hp more than the standard 140 (don’t do it!) that is included in the National No Haggle price of $59,994. One of the advantages of the Suzuki DF175 is that its tall 2.50:1 gear ratio allows it to swing a 14-inch prop that moves more water. Bumping the engine to a Suzuki DF200, which shares the same 2.9L powerhead, brings a 16-inch prop into play, and that would be a good match for the fairly stout 3,220-pound hull. Mercury is another option, and a 250 Verado might cost a few thousand dollars more, but it would deliver quiet, supercharged power to maximize the pontoon’s performance.

There’s virtually no bowrise to this boat on takeoff, and when some air gets moving between the twin sponsons, they compresses it, delivering lift and a smoother ride for passengers in the bow. The setup also helps it get on plane quickly, in just 3.2 seconds. Time to 25 mph was a rather stately 11.4 seconds, though. Top speed was 41.4 mph, but on another model with this same hull, we reached speeds in the mid-40s with a 200 hp Mercury Verado, so that number of stallions seems to be this hull’s sweet spot.

HANDLING

While the 258PF has twin sponsons up front, it doesn’t behave like a two-tube pontoon boat. Twin-tube pontoons typically stay very flat during hard cornering — most experience a slight lean to the outside — but the 258’s handling was more like a traditional monohull or a three-tube pontoon with a larger center tube. That is, when we cranked it hard over, it leaned in and carved a nice parabola. Our test boat used the U-Flex hydraulic steering system, which was smooth and had a nice feel.

About the only swing and miss on the test boat was the helm. The captain's chair was a bench seat with not much backrest recline, and there was no cutout in the console for a footrest, due to the refrigerator residing within. One plus for the bench were the twin garbage cans that reside underneath the seat bottom. Fortunately, owners can substitute a bucket seat for the bench at no charge.

BEST USES

The 258PF can pretty much do it all. It comes standard with a basic Monster Tower that can be upgraded to an upscale model with speakers ($4,499), so it's ready for watersports. There's a huge in-floor locker for skis, and the large rear deck has plenty of room for booting up. The stern four-step stainless steel boarding ladder will get a lot of use from divers who will be swimming around from the front to reboard. The rear deck has enough room for standard twin pedestal fishing chairs but has no rails that could get between anglers and their quarry.

There's more than enough seating for the 258's max capacity of 12, in three separate areas. Up front are twin seats that are a little unusual: the seat bottoms are too short to be recliners but too long to be club seats. The front of the seat bottoms comes to a point, so passengers sort of straddle it. In between is a high-low table for beverage and snack parking. Amidships is a sofa in front of the driver's console and a port-side recliner. Then, in the stern, there are twin rear-facing recliners. All the seats have loads of storage underneath.

PREFERRED SETUP

Razor takes a "podulized" approach to its floor plan, which allows buyers to customize the seating to reflect their preference. To further personalize things, there's an option to add deck colors ($2,999). And because the upper section is all fiberglass, including the seat frames and sides, it makes quite a visual statement, like the robin's egg blue our boat featured. Other useful options are the Bimini top ($899) and the Kitchen Package ($599), which includes drawers for storage that stay securely shut. The stereo upgrade goes from an adequate Kenwood unit to a premium Fusion sound system ($499). Another great option is the large rectangular snack table for the rear seating group ($499).

Caravelle Powerboats

Americus, GA • 855.444.2628 • www.Caravelleboatgroup.com

Founded in and manufacturing boats since 1966, Caravelle Powerboats has built a solid reputation on its sporty design and line of performance boats. Caravelle's new Razor E-Toon has been an innovative addition to the industry, sporting a unique, sleek, sporty look that has lots of jaws dropping as it goes by. Its fiberglass multi-hull cat-V with five lifting points allows it to glide through water while turning tight corners that would make any performance boat jealous. The innovative hull design lets it achieve top speed while using only half the horsepower of conventional pontoons. The spacious, roomy decks are designed to allow people to enjoy the freedom of moving about freely and lounging in the water. You really need to see it in action.
